                                                                         The present sequence is obtained from a clustral X alignment with CC protein 608. Protein 608 was identified using the method of the invention CC after subjecting rat osteoplasts to mechanical stress. Expression of the CC 608 gene was found to be upregulated by about 3-fold in cells subjected CC identification of genes responsive to a specific method for the CC identification of genes responsive to a specific mechanical stress. The CC method comprises applying the mechanical stress to an organism (tissue CC or cells comprising bone cells), isolating the specific cellular CC fractions and extracting mRNA from them, and differentially analysing the CC genes whose expression is responsive to a specific stress. The identification of genes whose expression is responsive to a specific stress. The identification genes whose expression is responsive to a specific stress. The identification genes are employed in determination methods are used for testing a controlling a physiological or disease state. The risk determination methods are used for testing or controlling a physiological or disease state (especially osteoporosis or CC controlling a physiological or disease state (especially osteoporosis or its symptoms or other conditions involved in mechanical stress or its bone development.

The present invention relates to novel single exon nucleic acid probes (see AAI00010-AAI10067). The present sequence is a peptide encoded by one such probe. The probes are useful for measuring human gene expression in a human breast sample, where the probe hybridises at high stringency to a predicting, diagnosing, grading, staging, monitoring and prognosing diseases of the human breast, particularly those diseases with polygenic aetiology. The diseases include: breast cancer, disorders of development, inflammatory diseases of the breast, fibrocystic changes, proliferative breast disease and non-carcinoma tumours.

Note: The sequence data for this patent did not form part of the printed specification, but was obtained in electronic format directly from WIPO at fire probes.

cc interact with the Cip subunit via conserved 23 amino acid dockerin co domains. Cip has been shown to contain 9 copies of a cohesin domain. CC The invention relates to the isolation of proteins binding to a novel coordinated a type II dockerin domain portion of Cip. The new CC I domain is designated a type II dockerin domain (as compared to the type CC I domain found on the catalytic subunits of the cellulosome). The type CC II dockerin domain has some sequence similarity to the type I dockerins compared to bind type I cohesin domains. CC The sequence presented here is an example of a protein which binds the novel type II dockerin and is the product of the OlpB gene. CC The protein contains 4 type II cohesin domains in the N-terminal portion CC of which the first domain (amino acid residues 28-192) is thought to bind CipA. The novel type II dockerin and cohesin domains can be used CC in complexes, especially enzyme complexes, to potentiate their catalytic actions in a synergistic manner.

This sequence was purified using a carrier which can couple wheat germ agglutinin and heparin to separate MPO. Fragments of this sequence (see AR80039 and AAR80040) were used to produce the amplification primers can then be used as probes to screen human cDNA libraries for MPO cDNA. The MPO cDNA can then be inserted into a plasmid which is used to canny formation of megakaryocytes, enlarging the size of promoting colony formation of megakaryocytes, enlarging the size of megakaryocytes and stimulating the proliferation of multipotential stem cells. The purification method can be used to isolate MPO from human urine or come of patients with aplastic anaemia, and from animal blood or urine the pradiation stimulation and the matocytopenia.

The present invention describes colon tumour associated proteins (I) and (II) and (II) can be used in gene therapy and vaccine production. (I) and CI may be used in the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of diseases associated with inappropriate colon tumour associated protein (TCAP) color used to treat disorders associated with decreased expression by coloric cancer. For example, (I) and (II) may be used to treat disorders associated with decreased expression by coloric cancer. For example, (I) and (II) may be rectifying mutations or deletions in a patient's genome that affect the cativity of TCAPs by expressing inactive proteins or to supplement the produce the TCAP production of them. Additionally, (II) may be used to produce the TCAP proteins, by inserting the nucleic acids into a host complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used to down regulate. TCAP expression and activity. The anti-(I) antibodies may also be used to down regulate as diagnostic agents for detecting the presence of TCAPs in samples.

Example 1; Fig 4; 34pp; English.

The invention relates to a method of treating osteoarthritis via the administration of a composition comprising the camptodactyly-arthropathy-according to a vara-pericarditis (CACP) protein, or portions of the CACP protein. The composition may further comprise a local anaesthetic. The composition of the invention may be administered via intra-articular or intravenous being megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). The gene encoding cacp protein (MSF) is located on chromosome 1q25-31, and mutations in this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have synovial arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have synovial acts as a synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and joints in the treatment of osteoarthritis. The composition may be applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, loss of range of movement or joint damage). The present sequence represents the bovine orthologue of human MSF, superficial zone protein (SZP).

The invention relates to a human tribonectin which is a product of CC gene. The tribonectin has at least one o-linked oilgosaccharide CC gene. The tribonectin has at least one o-linked oilgosaccharide CC lubricating molety and has a polypeptide sequence comprising 1-76 CC (AAB29774). The invention also relates to a nucleic acid encoding a CC (AAB29774). The invention also relates to a nucleic acid encoding a CC human MSF-derived tribonectin; a blocompatible composition comprising a CC of diagnosing osteoarthrikis or a predisposition to osteoarthritis by CC measuring the amount of MSF or its fragment in a biological sample of a confidence the presence of or predisposition to developing control control content fritis. The tribonectin and DNA encoding it are useful in the CC mammalian joints, such as articulating joints of humans, dogs or horses. CC tribonectin, when formulated as a membrane, foam, gel or fibre, is cuseful for inhibiting adhesion between two surfaces such as the injured cor trauman, or an artificial device e.g., an orthopaedic implant. In CC particular, one of the surfaces is pericardial tissue. DNA encoding a cc a substantial portion of a human MSF-derived tribonectin.

These were derived from expressed sequence tags (ESTs) from the organism of interest. They can be used in diagnostics, forensics, gene mapping, identification of mutations, to assess biodiversity and for nutritional purposes. The present sequence is a protein of the invention.

The invention relates to a human tribonectin which is a product of alternative splicing of the human MSF (megakaryocyte stimulating factor) gene. The tribonectin has at least one O-linked oligosaccharide lubricating moiety and has a polypeptide sequence comprising 1-76 repeats of a motif having at least 50% identity to the sequence KEPAPTT (AAB29774). The invention also relates to a nucleic acid encoding a

CC human MSF-derived tribonectin; a biocompatible composition comprising a CC human tribonectin for inhibiting tissue adhesion formation; and a method CC of diagnosing osteoarthritis or a predisposition to osteoarthritis by CC measuring the amount of MSF or its fragment in a biological sample of a CC indicates the presence of or predisposition to developing CC osteoarthritis. The tribonectin and DNA encoding it are useful in the CC treatment of osteoarthritis, where they may be used for lubricating CC mammalian joints, such as articulating joints of humans, dogs or horses. CC useful for inhibiting adhesion between two surfaces such as the injured CC tissues of a mammal, where the injury is caused by a surgical insertion CC or trauma, or an artificial device e.g., an orthopædic implant. In CC particular, one of the surfaces is pericardial tissue. DNA encoding a CC tribonectin may be used in gene therapy. The present sequence represents

                                      The invention relates to a method of treating osteoarthritis via the CC administration of a composition comprising the camptodactyly-arthropathy. CC coxa vara-pericarditis (CACP) protein, or portions of the CACP protein. The composition may further comprise a local anaesthetic. The composition of the invention may be administered via intra-articular or intravenous conjection. The human CACP protein is identified in the invention as the protein (MSF) is located on chromosome 1925-31, and mutations in this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly constraints without evidence of inflammation. CACP protein (MSF) carthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have synovial conditions in the treatment of osteoarthritis. The composition may be consisted to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, consisted to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, consisted to lower the pain, consisted the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, consisted to lower the pain, consisted the pain,

The sequence given is a full length translation from the megakaryocyte of stimulating factor (MSF) precursor. The sequence covered by exons II, and IV encodes megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). This considered by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding the ministry leader, an initiating methionine proceeding exon II and a secretory leader, an initiating methionine proceeding exon II and a sequences derived from human megakaryocyte colony stimulating factor (Meg-CSF). Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a concoding the original meg-CSF includes exons II-IV and is thought to terminate in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a concoding the original meg-CSF includes exons II-IV and is thought to primary transcript of this gene may be cleaved in different ways to valid a family of mRNA's each encoding a different ways from the processing of the sequence of the calso implicated in the stability, folding and processing of the consecute of the resulting factor, is one or more of these exons may contain the processing or folding of the appropriate structure of the resulting factor, is one or more of these exons may contain the consecution of the cellular matrix or extracellular matrix processing. Both naturally cocuring MSF's may be characterised by carlous combinations of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different combinations of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different combinations.

The present sequence is encoded by an intestinal insect mucin (IIM) co isoform IIM22. The isoforms IIM22 and IIM14 (see AAZ45836) are nearly co identical isoforms. The proteins are identical except for slightly co different peptide lengths in some repetitive regions, which is common communication proteins. The IIM cDNA sequence was identified and cloned from common common in larval peritrophic membrane (PM). The IIM polypeptides are useful in the production of transgenic or combinant vectors which express e.g. the polypeptide or antibodies confired against it. Such vectors are useful to produce IIM proteins, commission proteins and portions of IIM to disrupt the PM.

CC vectors comprising DNA encoding anti-IIM antibodies can especially be used to protect plants against insect pests having an IIM protein in common comparison of their midgut. The vector could be used to enhance the defenses of comparison plants or enhance the effectiveness of bio-engineered comparison of the vector could be used to enhance the defenses of comparison plants or enhance the effectiveness of bio-engineered comparison of the produced. Since IIM was shown to be degraded in vivo in T. ni larvae by enhancin (which is encoded and comparison period by specific baculoviruses and known to facilitate entry of virus centarion-like entry of virus enhancin-like entry ent

RESA and FIRA have antigenicity suitable for providing protective immunity against Plasmodium falciparum malarial infections.

Its amino acid sequence shows a high proline content, but there is no homology to any known proline-rich antigens of mycobacteria. Novel M. tuberculosis proteins (see AAW31851-57) are claimed. These can be produced a protein seamontain associately in bacterial, yeast, fungal or

The present sequence is obtained from a clustral X alignment with protein 608. Protein 608 was identified using the method of the invention after subjecting rat osteoblasts to mechanical stress. Expression of the 608 gene was found to be upregulated by about 3-fold in cells subjected to mechanical strain. The specification describes a method for the identification of genes responsive to a specific mechanical stress. The method comprises applying the mechanical stress to an organism (tissue or cells comprising bone cells), isolating the specific cellular fractions and extracting mRNA from them, and differentially analysing the mRNA in comparison with control samples. The method is used to identify genes whose expression is responsive to a specific stress. The identified genes are employed in determining risk associated with a physiological or disease state. The risk determination methods are used for testing a modificancy for the state of th

These medicaments, or genes identified by the method of the invention, are used for treating, preventing or controlling a physiological or disease state (especially osteoporosis obone density or other factors causing or contributing to osteoporosis its symptoms or other conditions involved in mechanical stress or its lack. The methods can also be used for advancing research or studies in recombinant proteins, especially in bacterial, yeast, fungal or higher eukaryote host cells, and used for diagnosing tuberculosis and other mycobacterial infections in humans or animals. The claimed proteins can also be used for epidemiological studies, for monitoring vaccination, and for the development of vaccines and monitoring vaccination.

CC and cohesins, which are found on the catalytic and scaffold subunits CC respectively. An example of such a complex is the cellulose degrading CC protein complex from Clostridium thermocellum, known as the cellulosome. CC rhis complex comprises around 15 proteins including endoglucanases, cc cellobiohydratases, hemicellulases, e.g. xylanases or lichinases, which integrating protein (CipA; see AAW43108).                                 The present invention relates to novel single exon nucleic acid probes (see AAI00010-AAI10067). The present sequence is a peptide encoded by one such probe. The probes are useful for measuring human gene expression in a human breast sample, where the probe hybridises at high stringency to a predicting, diagnosing, grading, staying, monitoring and prognosing diseases of the human breast, particularly those diseases with polygenic aetiology. The diseases include: breast cancer, disorders of development, inflammatory diseases of the breast, fibrocystic changes, proliferative breast disease and non-carcinoma tumours.
